

Particulate matter is especially insidious because, once inhaled, it does not leave the body: particulate matter will circulate in a person's blood and wreak havoc in his/her organs. That is largely due to particulate matter's shaft construction.

Pat Waring